Good news and challenges face North Carolina Eastern Region with collective efforts to develop a defense-aerospace sector as one of the bright spots, said John Chaffee, the 13-county regional economic development group director.

Chaffee welcomed more than 400 business, industry, government, and education leaders to the Greenville Hilton on January 6, 2011 for a State of the Region report including spokesmen in each segment and U.S. Sen. Kay Hagan, D-N.C., with the keynote address.

Martin Lancaster, former N.C. Community College System president and congressman, introduced four members of an Eastern North Carolina defense-aerospace sector panel. It included Rick Davis, Kinston site operator for Spirit Aero-Systems, "world's largest independent supplier of aircraft and a catalyst for that sector," and its newest major regional industry.

Davis said he can be a spokesman for the workforce of Eastern North Carolina as enthusiastic, energetic, skilled workers showed passion to get the company open last year and got the job done. That and the state and region "living up to every promise to our company" has Spirit committed to the military-aerospace cluster further developing in the region. "I can't emphasize enough that we appreciate the hard work and continued support," said Davis. He said that from July to December the company's Kinston facility started production and in December finished, packed and delivered an aircraft spar — a major structural component — to the company's Scotland plant. They also shipped a 65-foot-long, 75-foot-wide panel in April to prove out the delivery system. Davis said "2011 is going to be all about logistics" for Spirit as "we move thousands of parts from suppliers across the globe to our site." Chaffee showed defense-aerospace employment charts with Spirit currently employing 175 workers and an expectation of 450 to be employed by the end of 2011, and 750 by the end of 2012.

Mary Beth Fennell, industrial business operations director at Fleet Readiness Center East at Cherry Point air station, said the future looks bright for the 3,500 employees working there on 130 aircraft this year and 23,000 components for others. Also on the panel were Mike Stahl with Honeywell International in Rocky Mount and Vince Misciagna with AAR Structures and Systems Group in Goldsboro. Speaking for ECU's commitment to help lift a region weighted with unemployment, Deirdre Mageean, vice chancellor for Research and Graduate Studies, said "your university stands proudly with you as a resource and partner." She said ECU will seek to be "a national model for how a university can help transform a region" with research for natural resources, health issues, and science for emerging industries. Mageean said ECU will focus on developing distance education to make its resources available to all "no matter where they live" and continue to develop programs to accommodate education for the region's military population.

Vision

Our vision for the eastern counties of North Carolina is a highly skilled workforce with an educational attainment level that meets the needs of the 21st Century workplace, so that local firms can compete in a technologically advanced global economy.

Mission

Our mission is to ensure that our workforce development system is customer focused, demand-driven and accountable in preparing our current and future workforce to meet the changing needs of a highly-competitive global economy.

Value Added

We add economic value to our communities by ensuring that quality education, job training, and employment opportunities are available for job/training seekers and employers alike, thereby improving the quality of life for our citizens throughout eastern North Carolina.

Key Strategies

- Engage business and community leaders in addressing workforce issues and promote strategies to improve education levels & basic workplace skills.
- Strengthen alliances with economic development to identify and address the workforce needs of current and future industries.
- Implement a community awareness plan that promotes the WDB, JobLink Career Centers, and partner services.
- Identify and implement effective employment and training strategies that result in employment opportunities for all citizens.

Directors Corner

Dear Colleagues,

Much continues to be at stake in the workforce development arena. On the National front, the Senate held two votes on competing appropriations measures to fund the federal government for the rest of FY2011. The House-passed bill (H.R. 1) failed on a vote of 44-56, while the Senate version fell on a vote of 42-58. The current continuing resolution was set to expire on March 18, but House Appropriations Chairman Hal Rogers introduced a Continuing Resolution (CR) to fund the federal government at current levels through April 8.

The legislation (H.J. Res 48) would cut approximately $6 billion in spending. There have been five stopgap funding measures since the fiscal year began on October 1, 2010. Another short-term CR will allow congressional leaders time to continue negotiations on a long-term plan to keep the government running through the end of the fiscal year. [For more details on the bill and the list of cuts, go to <http://appropriations.house.gov>.]

On the State front, the Governor announced a sweeping consolidation that affects numerous state agencies. The plans are to restructure state government to make it more efficient. Organizations will be streamlined. Core services will be prioritized. Many divisions, programs and sections will no longer exist as we currently know them. The goal is to create a leaner, more nimble state government that will focus on efficiencies, priorities and cost savings.

As apart of those efforts, the Governor announced that the NC Employment Security Commission will be consolidated into the Department of Commerce. Though it is too early to know the details and transition timeline, this is good news in many ways for North Carolina's businesses and job-seekers. Since 1995, North Carolina has been working toward establishing an integrated Workforce Development System, known as NC JobLink Career Centers. This consolidation will allow the state to fully align and solidify those efforts. The Governor has created a website that identifies outlines her plan at www.setgovernmentstraight.nc.gov

With change in the air, the Board, staff, JobLink partners, and WIA service providers have continued its focus on JobsNow to work together during these challenging times to ensure high quality employment and training services are available. From July - December, a record number of over 34,000 individuals visited our nine local JobLink Center seeking services. With employment rates at nearly 10%, one service that remains untapped for local employers is the newly funded National Emergency Grant On-the-Job training program which will reimburse employers a portion of the wages during the training period. As businesses begin hiring this Spring, we anticipate this program will be a great benefit in jump starting employment opportunities for many long-term displaced workers.

While we are uncertain of what actions will transpire over the next couple of months as it relates to the federal budget, let us embrace the change of Spring with optimism and a renewed sense of urgency and commitment to making North Carolina's Workforce Investment System work for the citizens and local businesses of North Carolina.

$776,650 in grants to be awarded in Eastern North Carolina

The North Carolina Rural Economic Development Center announced it had awarded 46 grants totaling $5.4 million to create jobs, provide clean water and promote economic development in rural counties. The grants will create or retain 1,400 jobs and assist projects in more than 40 counties. The center's board of directors approved the grants Feb. 22. The grants were made possible by appropriations of the N.C. General Assembly.

The center awarded 42 grants worth $5 million for projects creating jobs in rural communities. The projects will serve nearly 240 businesses, create 670 jobs and retain an additional 700 jobs. Projects include the extension of water and sewer service to new or expanding businesses, renovation of vacant buildings for new business locations, construction or renovation of health care facilities, and innovative local and regional economic development projects.

Below is a breakdown of the grant funded in the Eastern Region:

Nash County, $32,000 for a medical center serving southwestern Nash, Franklin, Johnston and Wilson counties. The center will provide primary care full time and offer space for specialty physicians on a part-time basis. The project will create four jobs.

Pitt County, $400,000 for construction of a children's hospital at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The project will create 50 jobs.

James Sprunt Community College, $59,650 to purchase tortilla manufacturing equipment for the college's Eastern Carolina Food Ventures Kitchen. A start-up company being incubated at the kitchen will purchase local corn as an ingredient in its tortillas. Potential sales in Duplin and surrounding counties are estimated at $4.5 million annually. The project will create nine jobs and serve six businesses.

Pamlico Community College, $75,000 for an entrepreneurial development program targeting low-income residents and ex-offenders exiting the prison system. The program will include a matched savings program (individual development accounts), financial literacy and business training, and mentoring. The project will create two jobs and two businesses.

North Carolina's Eastern Region, $210,000 for a program assisting counties in becoming certified as Work Ready Communities. The regional partnership is working with CFED on a 16-month demonstration of the process.

The N.C. Rural Economic Development Center is a private, nonprofit organization whose mission is to develop sound economic strategies that improve the quality of life in rural North Carolina, with a special focus on individuals with low to moderate incomes and communities with limited resources. The center operates a multifaceted program that includes conducting research into rural issues; testing promising rural development strategies; advocating for policy and program innovations; and building the productive capacity of rural leaders, entrepreneurs and community organizations.

Craven County Schools WIA Students Tour Fleet Readiness East Aboard Cherry Point MCAS

Craven WIA Students Takes on Service Project

Craven County School's Workforce Investment classes from New Bern High School and Havelock High School recently toured Fleet Readiness Center at Cherry Point. Students were treated to a personal on-board tour of Pedro, the rescue helicopter.

They also met with representatives from Human Resources who discussed job opportunities aboard base. They were told how to apply for positions and what kind of internships were available.

Craven County Schools WIA students at West Craven High School sponsored Troops in Afghanistan Service Project. Personal hygiene items and non-perishable foods were collected from the three high schools, West Craven, New Bern, and Havelock and mailed to the 183 Maintenance Company, presently deployed to Shindand, Afghanistan.

Phyllis Smith, case manager at West Craven High School learned of the needs from her son, Ryan, a former graduate of West Craven who is currently deployed to Afghanistan. The WIA youth wanted to make a difference and turned this service project into a leadership project. Donations from staff and FBLA at West Craven assisted with the postage. Twenty-one boxes packed full were mailed to the servicemen and woman.

Mark Best, Craven Community College Receives Statewide Recognition from the N.C. Community College System

Best Named as 2011 NCCCS Staff Person of the Year

Mark Best, the college's director of Craven Community College's workforce readiness programs, was named the N.C. Community College System's Staff Person of the Year for 2011. His career at the college spans 25 years, and he is a 1974 graduate of West Craven High. He earned his bachelor's degree at Fayetteville State University in 1978.

"I am so proud to represent Craven at the system level," Best said in a news release. "I want to thank all of my colleagues here for their support and encouragement." As the college's workforce readiness director, Best schedules and manages short-term classes designed to teach basic computer skills, interviewing techniques, résumé writing, and other skills. He works closely with the unemployed and underemployed, the release states. He has also recently helped to organize career fairs, to build partnerships with area organizations, and he has worked one-on-one with people searching for the right path, according to the release.

"Mark wants people to know what's available for them here at Craven, and he has worked hard to ensure that we, at the college, remain focused on the educational needs of our community," said Layne Harpine, Craven's dean of continuing education.

The Staff Person of the Year Award was established in 2001, according to the website nccommunitycolleges.edu, to recognize "excellent performance and commitment to the community college mission" of non-teaching staff at the system's 58 community colleges.

Catherine Chew, president of Craven Community College, said Best's years of dedication to the college and its mission made him a perfect choice for the honor. "Mark has had such a positive impact on so many people's lives," Chew said. Best is the third employee from Craven Community College to receive a statewide honor from the system, according to the release. In 2004, Si Seymour, then the college's interim vice president for instruction, received the system's Staff Person of the Year Award. Philip Evancho, then the college's fine arts director, received the system's Excellence in Teaching Award in 1990.

Best will be formally recognized at an April 14 system event in Raleigh. The award, sponsored by BB&T, comes with a cash prize, a certificate and a plaque. The college's foundation will also receive $2,000.

North Carolina Career Readiness Certification

The Year in Review 2010

Thanks to all of the NC CRC partners for your hard work in building North Carolina's skilled workforce with the North Carolina Career Readiness Certificate (NC CRC). Due to your contributions, North Carolina is now ranked as the 5th highest state in the nation for the number of CRCs issued! The total of NC CRCs issued as of December 2010 in North Carolina is 66,706. The distribution by certificate level is as follows: Gold- 19%, Silver- 57%, and Bronze- 24%.

These percentages are in line with the distribution percentages for the nation, which are Gold-20%, Silver-53%, Bronze-27%. See Regional Partnership charts below for additional detail about distribution across the state. The NC CRC website (www.crcnc.org) also provides real-time workforce development information by using the Talent Pipeline search option. 2010 was an incredible year with the number of individuals who earned an NC CRC increasing by 38% as compared to the NC CRCs earned in 2009 (19,123 in 2009, to 26,386 in 2010). The community colleges and partners did an excellent job of integrating the NC CRC into the JobsNOW "12 in 6" initiative programs. 7,423 CRCs were issued through the JobsNOW training programs. The Performance Incentive Grant provided an essential source of funds for individuals in need of assistance to earn a NC Career Readiness Certificate. Over 8,200 individuals earned an NC CRC with funding provided by the Performance Incentive Grant. These funds are available through June 30, 2011.

There are approximately 150 high schools providing students with an opportunity to earn an NC CRC and over 250 employers across the state recognizing the NC CRC as value-added or requiring the NC CRC for employment. The NC Career Readiness Certificate is integrated into all areas of the community college programs including Basic Skills, Continuing Education, and Curriculum. The certificate is used in some programs as a pre-requisite and is part of the instruction in other programs. Other state agencies such as

Vocational Rehabilitation and the Department of Corrections have found the NC CRC to be a credential that provides an "extra edge" for their clients. T he year 2010 saw the debut of the first annual combined NC CRC/ HRD Training Academy with a fantastic sharing of information and best practices. The type of employers recognizing the NC CRC is increasing and continuing to diversify. The highest prevalence of use is currently in the following industries: Manufacturing and Advanced Manufacturing, Employment and Staffing Agencies, Health Care Facilities, and Public Safety organizations. The 4th quarter 2010 CRC rankings by community college service area are available on www.crcnc.org. Click on Presentations and scroll down to 2010 Fourth Quarter CRC Standings.

ASPIRE – Assessing Skills for Performance in a Rebounding Economy

Career Readiness Certificate February Report

ASPIRE emphasizes vertical and horizontal integration of WorkKeys and CRC in a number of workforce components including K-12 schools, community colleges, Workforce Development Boards, economic development organizations, non-profits, and business and industry. By leveraging resources available from WDBs (through Workforce Investment Act - WIA programs for dislocated workers and low income adults and youth), ASPIRE maximizes the impact of funds as it develops a model for others in the region and in the state.

Capitalizing on the availability of successful, working models (such as the Wayne Occupational Readiness Keys for Success Initiative (WORKS) in Wayne County and Lenoir CC's model HRD program), ASPIRE will facilitate the development of similar projects through mentoring, guiding and advising the other members of the alliance.

N.C. to Receive $46 Million in Federal Funds for Small Business Loans

Community banks can leverage more than $800 million in assistance to small, local businesses

North Carolina Gov. Bev Perdue recently announced that North Carolina will receive $46.1 million in federal funds for the N.C. Capital Access Program (NC-CAP) at the North Carolina Rural Economic Development Center. The money, allocated through the Small Business Jobs Act of 2010, will allow community banks to help leverage more than $800 million in credit for North Carolina small businesses.

North Carolina is one of the first two states to have their applications approved by the U.S. Treasury Department. Gov. Perdue called on Congress to fund the Jobs Act in October, vowing that North Carolina would put the money to work immediately. Between 1994 and 2008, NC-CAP helped North Carolina lending institutions make 1,850 small business loans totaling more than $103 million, helping save or create more than 27,000 jobs. NC-CAP is a loan loss reserve program that encourages financial institutions to make small business loans.

"Expanding access to credit for small businesses is critical for speeding North Carolina's economic recovery. Two-thirds of new jobs are created by small businesses, and they employ our friends, neighbors and family members," said Gov. Perdue. "We will use these federal funds to help those small businesses to grow, and that helps communities across our state. Small businesses depend on access to credit in order to hire and expand, and this funding will better position main street entrepreneurs to create new jobs and invest in their local communities," said Treasury Secretary Tim Geithner. "Innovative public-private lending partnerships like the State Small Business Credit Initiative have a proven track record, and I am pleased this funding is on its way to North Carolina to support job creation and economic growth."

"I feel this is a very important program that will allow small businesses and manufacturers the opportunity to work through North Carolina bankers to acquire much needed capital," said U.S. Rep. Walter Jones (R-NC).

Unemployment Rates By State, Seasonally Adjusted Annual Average 2010

During 2010, annual average unemployment rates rose in 31 states and the District of Columbia, declined in 18 and was unchanged in one state, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS). For North Carolina, the annual average unemployment rate was 10.6 percent. Nevada recorded the highest rate, 14.9 percent, followed by Michigan (12.5%) and California (12.4%). According to the BLS, this was the first time since 2005 that Michigan did not post the highest unemployment rate among the states. North Dakota reported the lowest jobless rate of 3.9 percent in 2010, followed by Nebraska (4.7%) and South Dakota (4.8%). The unemployment rates for our neighboring states were Georgia (10.2%), South Carolina (11.2%), Tennessee (9.7%), and Virginia (6.9%).
